

Here's a little poem for Autumn

Summer's End

The spider spins its silken thread flocks of monarchs now descend the swallow tails, tiger and night are ending now their wandering flight wisps of marestails sweep the sky and speed travel of the dragonfly crickets chirp their evening plight while my garden lair leaves the spider its silken snare

Carol Nissen copyright 2012

<