

Little Yellow Water Lily

Wednesday, 31 July 2019 09:28 - Last Updated Wednesday, 31 July 2019 09:42

Little Yellow Water Lily returns

After 27 years this little guy still blooms. It's been dragged out by racoons, robins, and skunks yet still blooms after being stored in a basement all winter. It's a miniature hardy water lily whose name is Helvola. Even though the garden is in view of the World Trade Center, it's on a cliff that is more like Wild Kingdom. The green wire grid is to protect the tub garden being dug up by racoons, skunks, squirrels, groundhogs and possums. We got them all here.

<http://mycitygarden.net/>