

This info is courtesy of Bethe Schwartz...(thanks Bethe!)

Bee Keeping Class for NJ

Part 1 – Beginner Beekeeping Series – Is Beekeeping for You?

Perhaps you would like to harvest honey or beeswax, pollinate your plantings, help the plight of the honey bee, or experience the pure satisfaction and pleasure of raising bees. NOW is your chance to order bees for the season. The Beginner Beekeeping Series is led by local beekeeper, Debbie Demmer. Through research, innovation, experimentation, observation, and care, Debbie has become a beekeeper of happy, healthy bees. She pursues bio-dynamic, chemical-free beekeeping and is currently developing an all-natural line of skin and hair care products. Her teaching is thought provoking, practical and fun. Is Beekeeping for You? is the first class of the Beginner Beekeeping Series. Attendees of this class will have the opportunity to explore the following:

- - Where do I get beekeeping equipment and what options are available?
- - What type of hive equipment suits me best?
- - How do I get bees and what options are available?
- - What are the first year costs and how can I save money?
- - Where should I locate my bees?

When: Monday, March 5th, 2012 from 7:00 pm - 8:30 pm.

Where: All classes will be held at the NOFA-NJ Headquarters at 334 River Road, Hillsborough, NJ 08844.

This is an introductory class preceding 5 additional hands-on experiential learning classes that will feature some wonderful additional speakers. Register for "Is Beekeeping for You?" at NOFA-NJ's website.

Register for is Beekeeping for You link

Hope to see you there!
Alison

Bee Keeping in NJ Class

Tuesday, 28 February 2012 07:45 - Last Updated Tuesday, 28 February 2012 17:34
